Section Protested: Steve Oblenes was making runs on the practice course (5+ runs, hot lapping because it was empty) immediately before shift 7 began running. He was on his competition tires. The 100 grid began running within 30 minutes of his last practice run, although some timing delays meant it was more than 30 minutes before he took his first run (he was near the back of the 100 grid). I believe this increased his core tire temps and gave him an advantage as a first driver, and is against multiple rules cited below.

Solo rules 6.11 tire temperature management: supplemental heating of tires less than 30 minutes prior to the first car of the heat starting a run is prohibited

Solo Supplement : 4.2 During the days that a car competes, the tires to be used for competition are prohibited from running on the National Test & Tune course.

ProSolo Event Rules section D2: no tire warmups are allowed anywhere on the site, except in the designated start area (green cones)
